On the way to Mae Salong Hill, located in Mae Salong Nok sub-district, Mae Fah Luang district which is a Chinese community of division 39 that has settled here for so long. Currently, the Chinese community on Mae Salong hill is called Santikhiri Village, located at an average height of 1,200 meters above sea level with beautiful views and cool weather for the whole year. The main income comes from the cultivation of oolong tea. After that, we would take you to Phra Borommathat Chedi Sri Nakarin Sathit Maha Santikhiri, located on the top of the highest mountain of Mae Salong. It is about 4 kilometers away from the village, there is a paved road cutting up to Phra Borommathat, but the road is very steep and winding. Phra Borommathat was completed around 1996 as a merit-making gift to Her Royal Highness Princess Maha Chakri Sirindhorn. It is an applied Lanna style chedi. On a rectangular base, about 30 meters height, and about 15 meters width on each side, decorated with gray tiles. There are three arches on each side, decorated with four standing Buddha images, the bell decorated with gold leaf and carved pattern. Close to the chedi is an contemporary Lanna-styled chapel where the Phra Borommathat is located. It is the highest point of Mae Salong mountain range, so you can see the scenery from afar, especially in the evening. At the same time, the stupa is still outstanding and dignified as another symbol of Mae Salong hill.

On the way to Wang Puttan Tea Plantation, it is a tea plantation located in Mae Salong hill area. There are both tea plantations and accommodation here in one place, so you can come here to relax, and harvesting the tea leaves, watch the tea leaves harvesting. Here, we can feel the meticulous process of tea harvesting and maintaining the quality of tea. There is also a cafe with beautiful decorations made to resemble a Chinese mountain top living, with both Chinese lions and Chinese-style guest houses.

On the way to Chiang Rai Night Bazaar, it is a place where many things are gathered together, whether it's a souvenir of hill tribe people's handicrafts, clothes, jewelry of indigenous people, including indigenous products, and various arts and crafts products. Street food is also available here for you to try.

Evening Dinner at Chiangrai Night Bazaar

On the way to Master Chaloechai's Clock Tower, or officially known as In Honor of Her Majesty the Queen Clock Tower (Buddhist Art Gallery), is located in the middle of Chiang Rai city, Banprakan Road - Jed Yot Road (near Chiang Rai Night Bazaar - Walking Street) It was built to honor Her Majesty the Queen, with Ajarn Chalermchai Kositpipat as the designer. It took 5 years to build this beautiful golden clock tower with Thai pattern. This clock tower can change color at night. Every day around 19.00 – 21.00, the lights installed inside the clock tower will change color, along with the sound of Chiang Rai's remembrance music.

On the way to Mae Fah Luang Garden, it is a winter flower garden in an area of 25 Rai, located in a plain on the north side of the Doi Tung Palace. It is located on the former site of Akha Pa Kluay village that has 62 families. In the past, this village was an important transit route and a homestay of a caravan that transport opium, heroin potion, and weapons. In addition, location is in the middle of the valley, and full of houses, unable to expand and maintain cleanliness, garbage and waste water. Doi Tung Development Project asked the villager to move to a new place which is about 500 meters from the old place, but it is located on a hill, spacious and beautiful. The flower garden is built in 1991 under the royal initiative of Princess Srinagarindra, so that Thai people who do not have the opportunity to go abroad can see the winter flowers at this garden, which has been taken care of to be beautiful every day. The flowers will be changed due to the season.

After that, we would take you to Doi Tung Palace, that was started building on December 26, 1987 when Princess Srinagarindra was 88 years old. Previously, the princess said that after her 90th birthday, she will not go to Switzerland anymore. Therefore, the Office of the Royal Secretariat chose Doi Tung which has beautiful scenery. At the same time, when Princess Srinagarindra looked at the area in the beginning of 1987, she was satisfied and gave out the royal initiative to build a house at Doi Tung. There is also a royal order to plant forests on high mountains, thus becoming Doi Tung Development Project.

On the way to Phrathat Doi Tung Temple, it is one of the ancient archaeological sites in the Northern region of Thailand and the most famous stupa of Chiang Rai Province. It is considered the first pagoda of Lanna. which is ancient, beautiful, and you can see the nature of Chiang Rai city clearly from here. There are 2 pagodas standing side by side of each other, also they are considered to be the stupa of The Year of The Pig. It is considered that once in the life of a person born in The Year of The Pig should come to worship this pagoda to be blessed about the prosperity in life.

After that, we would take you to Doi Chang Mub viewpoint at the Doi Chang Mub Operation Base. It is another landmark that has a very beautiful view. It also allows visitors to see the beauty in the operation base just by showing their ID card to the staff before entering. The entrance is shaped like a maze built with bamboo fences.

Continue the trip, going to Ban Pha Hee or Doi Pha Hee, located in Pong Ngam sub-district, Mae Sai district. It is a small village in the middle of the valley close to the Thai-Myanmar border. The villagers who live here are the Akha hill tribe people, the Red Muser and the Black Muser. In the past, the forest in this area was cleared by the local hill tribe people to plant corn until in 1988. Doi Tung Development Project has entered the village and encourage villagers to stop doing mobile plantation and teach the villagers how to live with the nature. They forbid villagers to cut down the forest, and encourage villagers to grow more coffee until becoming an important turning point of the Akha Pha Hee people who turned to coffee cultivation as the main occupation of the whole village. By promoting the cultivation of Arabica coffee, the coffee has yielded good results in the highlands that are famous all over the world by carrying the slogan "Growing coffee is better than planting opium poppy", you can walk around to admire the beauty of the mountain scenery, and walk around the Akha hill tribe village. Each house is built in descending order along the hillside, among the mountains and green forests. The front view are mountain ranges of Doi Pha Mi and Doi Tung. Also, here, here you can watch the swinging tradition which is not available every day. Here, you can stop by and taste the delicious coffee. The signature of Pha Hee Coffee Shop is that you can take the beautiful view of mountains lined up in front. There are chic sitting corners, watching the view, hanging legs, sipping coffee, and taking beautiful photos.

On the way to Tham Luang Forest Park, located in Doi Nang Non National Reserved Forest, Pong Pha sub-district, Mae Sai district, covering an area of approximately 5,000 rai, the Royal Forest Department announced the establishment of a national park on October 1, 1986. In the past, Tham Luang - Khun Nam Nang Non is not the most popular tourist attraction of Chiang Rai. There are only a few people that know this place, but since the event of the Wild Boars youth football team stuck in Tham Luang in 2018, news has spread all over the world. Therefore, this place has become the popular tourist destination of Chiang Rai ever since.
