Cure-It Stainless Steel Injector

Washdown design for the food processing industry.

- Powerful, 1/2 hp motor puts less stress on the pump, resulting in extended life — this is the most powerful motor available in a portable unit.
- High-velocity fan keeps the motor cool. • On/Off switch • Fully washdown, no exposed parts. • Only 4 bolts for easy maintenance.
- Shroud covers motor shaft with drain hole at bottom. • Pump is made of stainless steel, USDA/FDA materials.
- Includes: Complete Curing Pump Unit with motor, hoses, injection valve, artery needle, spray needle.
- Platform with smooth surface base has an open-end design to allow the unit to be easy to move and carry.
- The open ends also allow for easier cleaning underneath the unit. Water won't get trapped so less chance for bacteria to form.
- Rubber grommets on the base and under motor to assist with making the unit very quiet.
- The pressure release valve design allows user to easily adjust pressure with no tools needed.

Char Marking Rings

When precooking patties (for example, beef, chicken, or soy patties) and other food products at a high production rate for fast food or for frozen dinners, it is often desirable to simulate the effect of broiling food products on a grill, which is commonly called "char marking" in the food processing industry.

Char marking improves the eye appeal of the product by branding spaced parallel stripes, giving the appearance that the product was broiled over charcoal on spaced grill bars.
