In light of its selection as a "Super Global University" by the Ministry of Education, Culture, Sports, Science and Technology in 2014, It is introducing new educational programs and making further efforts to internationalize itself. Toyo University's goal is to develop "human assets" possessing the ability to thrive is not only Japan but any region or society of the world following graduation. With this in mind, it gives students comprehensive skills that are supported by three pillars: "philosophy education," "globalization," and "career preparation." It is thus starting a new "basic education program" by reinforcing and reorganizing its liberal arts education to link these three pillars.
